University profile	The Stockholm School of Economics, SSE is a private university with very little dependence on government support (about 10 percent of total revenue per annum) that trains young and midcareer women and men for leading positions in both the private and public sectors. About 1,900 students are registered in programs at various levels (the Executive Education Programs excluded). SSE research programs rank among the best in the world in areas such as Health Economics, Finance, Business Law and Economics, to name but a few. SSE was founded in 1909 on the initiative of Swedish business leaders, and the School has maintained close ties with the business community ever since. SSE has international presence in Riga and St. Petersburg/Moscow and is represented in other ways in Tokyo and Helsinki. SSE operates an extensive Student Exchange Program with 60 of the world's most renowned business schools as our partner universities. SSE collaborates with several leading institutions of higher education around the world. In 1999, SSE became the first Swedish university to be fully accredited by EQUIS (The European Quality Improvement System). SSE is the Swedish member institution of CEMS (The Community of European Management Schools) and the only Nordic representative in ICEDR (International Consortium for Executive Development Research), a society comprising the 25 foremost business schools (Harvard University, MIT, Wharton, among others) of business and 40 of the leading corporations (ABB, Deutsche Bank, Unilever, Ericsson to mention a few) in the world.
